

GBTEC and Sopra Steria announce strategic partnership to support digital transformation

GBTEC, one of the world's leading providers of Business Process Management (BPM) software, and Sopra Steria, one of Europe's leading technology groups, announce their new strategic partnership. The goal of the collaboration is to help companies successfully digitize and optimize their business processes, giving them a competitive edge.

The partnership between GBTEC and Sopra Steria is based on a shared vision of helping businesses manage today's digital transformation. GBTEC, known for its innovative BPM solutions, helps Fortune 500 companies, mid-sized organizations as well as the public sector to model, analyze, collaborate and automate their business processes. Coupled with Sopra Steria's extensive experience in digital transformation and expertise in consulting, technology and systems integration, companies will benefit from customized solutions and successful transformation projects in the future.

Kiumars Farhur, Head of Partner Management at GBTEC, expressed his delight with the partnership: "The combination of our innovative BPM solutions with Sopra Steria's extensive industry expertise opens up exciting opportunities for our customers."

Sopra Steria is also enthusiastic about the collaboration. GBTEC's intelligent business process management solutions provide Sopra Steria with a valuable platform that ideally complements its extensive methodological and technical expertise. A joint statement declares, "This partnership expands our service portfolio in the area of digital transformation and business process management. We look forward to the cooperation and are convinced that by combining our expertise, we can make it even easier for our customers to integrate transparency, control, sustainability, as well as AI and data-driven innovations into their business processes."

The strategic partnership between GBTEC and Sopra Steria marks a significant step in helping companies achieve digital transformation and become more efficient and
